NOTE: Use the 35-mark assessment rubric on page 40 to assess candidates' essays.

The following points may be included in the essay, among others. Allow for candidates' own interpretation as well:

- Tom in the Maycomb society
 - He is a hard-working black man.
 - He is decent and well-spoken.
 - He earns an honest living.
 - He is well-thought of by his employer, Mr Link Deas.
 - He is married and has three children.
 - He feels sorry for Mayella and often helps her with household chores. This leads to his downfall.
 - Mayella tries to kiss him.
 - He runs off and is convicted of a crime of which he is not guilty.
 - Atticus proves that he is innocent.
 - He loses all hope and does not believe that his appeal will help him.
 - He tries to escape from prison and is shot and killed.
 - He is judged by the colour of his skin and not as a human being.

- Boo Radley in the Maycomb society
 - As a young boy, he commits a petty crime.
 - He is convicted and is punished.
 - His father takes charge of his punishment and he is banished to his home.
 - Boo is not allowed to leave the house.
 - He becomes a recluse – not by choice.
 - People think that he is a monster.
 - He is blamed for everything that goes wrong in Maycomb, even if the guilty parties are found.
 - Everybody is afraid of Boo.
 - He helps the children.
 - He tries to befriend the children.
 - In actual fact, he is very kind – he leaves gifts for Scout and Jem.
 - He mends Jem's pants.
 - He covers Scout with a blanket when Miss Maudie's house burns down.
 - His father prevents him from befriending the children by closing the knot hole.
 - Boo saves Scout's life when she is attacked by Bob Ewell.
 - He is a gentle person and Heck Tate and Atticus are the only people who realise this.
 - Heck Tate spares Boo the humiliation of being exposed as Bob's killer.

- How Tom and Boo are like mockingbirds
 - Boo
 - He is unfairly punished by his father – the crime does not warrant the punishment.
 - He becomes a recluse unnecessarily.
 - He is mocked by people.
 - He has no social skills because of the way he is treated by his father.
 - Even as a grown man, when he tries to befriend the children, his father does not allow it.
 - Thus, Boo is a mockingbird.

 - Tom
 - He is unfairly treated because of his race and colour.
 - He is convicted of a crime that he does not commit.
 - He is proven innocent but still is convicted.
 - He is killed and so he is like a mockingbird.

NOTE: Use the 35-mark assessment rubric on page 40 to assess candidates' essays.

The following points may be included in the essay, among others, but allow for the candidate's own interpretation as well:

- Siphso and his family
 - Siphso felt unloved as a child.
 - His parents favoured Themba. Themba always got his way.
 - Siphso was punished for Themba's mistakes.
 - His only toy (the wire bus) was taken away from him. When he complained to his parents, they always took Themba's side.
 - He never forgave his brother for these childhood events. This leads to a lot of pain and anguish for Siphso.
 - As a young man, Themba was popular with women. He was also popular in the struggle against apartheid. This made Siphso jealous and hate his brother.
 - Siphso was not allowed to further his studies, yet his parents found the money to put Themba through university. Siphso had to support his brother while he was at university. This causes Siphso much pain.
 - When Siphso married, Themba had an affair with his wife. There is a great possibility that Themba is the father of Thando.
 - Siphso's son Luvuyo idolised Themba. He blames Themba for his son's death.
 - Their father's funeral was turned into a political rally and Siphso blamed Themba for this.
 - He kept all this heartache to himself.
 - He could not forgive Themba or the government for his loss.

- Siphso and his employers
 - Siphso started working in a law firm as a clerk. On two occasions, he was promised that he could complete his articles, yet it was always given to young white boys entering the law firm.
 - He worked at the library for 33 years. He was regarded as the most suitable candidate for the post as Chief Librarian. The post was given to a younger person who had just returned from exile. This caused Siphso to become bitter and very angry.

- Sipho and Mandisa
 - Mandisa forces Sipho to face his demons.
 - She forces him to speak about her father.
 - She constantly questions him and so makes him very angry. This causes him to drink heavily. It is in this drunken state that he actually reveals the truth about Thando's mother and Themba.
 - He eventually faces the truth and realises that he cannot blame Themba for his son's death or his wife's affair.
 - He accepts that he was somewhat jealous of his younger brother. He accepts that it was because of his age that he was not appointed as the Chief Librarian. So, it is through the constant questioning of Mandisa that Sipho is able to forgive and free himself of all pain and heartache.
