2.1 [Scout has a conversation with Miss Maudie.]

In summer-time, twilights are long and peaceful. Often as not, Miss Maudie and I would sit silently on her porch, watching the sky go from yellow to pink as the sun went down, watching flights of martins sweep low over the neighbourhood and disappear behind the school house rooftops.

'Miss Maudie,' I said one evening, 'do you think Boo Radley's still alive?' 5

'His name's Arthur and he's alive,' she said. She was rocking slowly in her big oak chair. 'Do you smell my mimosa? It's like angels' breath this evening.'

'Yessum. How do you know?'

'Know what child?'

'That B – Mr Arthur's still alive?' 10

'What a morbid question. But I suppose it's a morbid subject. I know he's alive, Jean Louise, because I haven't seen him carried out yet.'

'Maybe he died and they stuffed him up the chimney.'

'Where did you get such a notion?'

'That's what Jem said he thought they did.' 15

'S-ss-ss. He gets more like Jack Finch every day.'

4.1 [Jack and Ralph have an argument.]

The trickle of smoke sketched a chalky line up the solid blue of the sky, wavered high up and faded. Ralph frowned. 'I wonder how far off you could see that.' 'Miles.' 'We don't make enough smoke.'	5
The bottom part of the trickle, as though conscious of their gaze, thickened to a creamy blur which crept up the feeble column. 'They've put on green branches,' muttered Ralph. 'I wonder!' He screwed up his eyes and swung round to search the horizon. 'Got it!' Jack shouted so loudly that Ralph jumped. 'What? Where? Is it a ship?'	10
But Jack was pointing to the high declivities that led down from the mountain to the flatter part of the island. 'Of course! They'll lie up there – they must do, when the sun's too hot —' Ralph gazed bewildered at his rapt face. '—they get up high. High up and in the shade, resting during the heat, like cows at home—'	15
'I thought you saw a ship!' 'We could steal up on one—paint our faces so they wouldn't see—perhaps surround them and then—' Indignation took away Ralph's control. 'I was talking about smoke! Don't you want to be rescued? All you can talk about is pig, pig, pig!' 'But we want meat!' 'And I work all day with nothing but Simon and you come back and don't even notice the huts!' 'I was working too—'	20 25

4.2 [The boys are rescued.]

The officer grinned cheerfully at Ralph. 'We saw your smoke. What have you been doing? Having a war or something?'
Ralph nodded.
The officer inspected the little scarecrow in front of him. The kid needed a bath, a hair-cut, a nose-wipe and a good deal of ointment.	5
'Nobody killed, I hope? Any dead bodies?'
'Only two. And they've gone.'
The officer leaned down and looked closely at Ralph.
'Two? Killed?'	10
Ralph nodded again. Behind him, the whole island was shuddering with flame. The officer knew, as a rule, when people were telling the truth. He whistled softly.
Other boys were appearing now, tiny tots some of them, brown, with the distended bellies of small savages. One of them came close to the officer and looked up.	15
'I'm, I'm—'
But there was no more to come. Percival Wemys Madison sought in his head for an incantation that had faded clean away.
The officer turned back to Ralph.	20
'We'll take you off. How many of you are there?'
Ralph shook his head. The officer looked past him to the group of painted boys.
'Who's boss here?'
'I am,' said Ralph loudly.	25

NOTE: Answer the questions set on BOTH extracts, i.e. QUESTION 6.1 and QUESTION 6.2.

6.1 [Mugo reflects on his life.]

'Why are you staring at me so?' Waitherero asked, and laughed in her throat. 'I always say you are a strange one, the kind that would murder their own mother, eh?'

He winced. Her seeing into him was painful.

Waitherero suddenly died of age and over-drinking. For the first time since their marriage, her daughters came to the hut, pretended they did not see Mugo, and buried her without questions or tears. They returned to their homes. And then, strangely, Mugo missed his aunt. Whom could he now call a relation? He wanted somebody, anybody, who would use the claims of kinship to do him ill or good. Either one or the other as long as he was not left alone, an outsider.

He turned to the soil. He would labour, sweat, and through success and wealth, force society to recognise him. There was, for him, then, solace in the very act of breaking the soil: to bury seeds and watch the green leaves heave and thrust themselves out of the ground, to tend the plants to ripeness and then harvest, these were all part of the world he had created for himself and which formed the background against which his dreams soared to the sky. But then Kihika had come into his life.

6.1.4 During the preparations for Uhuru, Mugo has two opportunities to become involved in the community. Name these opportunities. (2)

6.2 [Gikonyo talks to Warui.]

On the way to Mugo's hut, Gikonyo told Warui his disappointment over Green Hill Farm.

'And he did not tell you he had bought it when you saw him yesterday?' Warui asked.

'No, he did not tell me. I could see, though, that he did not want to look at me in the eyes.'

'The gods who rule us,' Warui said with sympathy. He wanted to tell Gikonyo the story of how people once rose against women-rulers who enriched themselves and forgot the responsibility of their office, but only muttered: 'They'll only raise wrath against the hearts of their worshippers.'

Gikonyo did not answer, and nothing further was said on the subject until they were near Mugo's hut.

'It is the old saying come true: Kamwene Kabagio ira,' Warui said.

SIPHO:	... Themba went to these gatherings because they were his hunting ground for other people's wives. Oh he was famous for that! There was not a single woman who had not slept with Comrade Themba. Wives, girlfriends, Themba made no distinction. I always worried that someone, some husband or boyfriend, was going to kill Themba even before the Security Police could. That is why I still blame him for the death of my son.	5
MANDISA:	That's the most despicable thing to say of your own brother. He loved Luvuyo.	10
SIPHO:	The last time I saw my son alive was when he was on his way to a little girl's funeral. He was a poet you see. He used to recite his poems at political rallies, funerals and special occasions. I told him not to go. I knew there was going to be trouble. I could see death in his eyes. He looked at me and said that Uncle Themba was right, I was a coward. He left. I never saw him alive again. I loved him too much. I wanted him to live. I did not want him to die. Did that make me a coward?	15

'Don't uncle me, please. My name is Ruben Lemeko. The boys at the factory call me China. Yours?'

'Zodwa.'

His eyes travelled from her small tender fingers as she washed a few things, to her man's jersey which was a faded green and too big for her, her thin frock, and then to her peach-coloured face, not well fed, but well framed and compelling under a soiled black beret. As he ate hungrily she shot a side-glance at him occasionally. There was something sly in those soft, moist, slit eyes, but the modest stoop at the shoulders gave him a benign appearance; otherwise he would have looked twisted and rather fiendish. There was something she felt in his presence: a repelling admiration. She felt he was the kind of man who could be quite attractive so long as he remained more than a touch away from the contemplator; just like those wax figures she once saw in the chamber of horrors.

12.2 [Pinkie and China have a conversation.]

At that very moment she realised fully the ghastliness of a man's jealousy, which gleamed and glanced on the blade and seemed to have raised a film which steadied the slit eyes. Against the back wall she managed to speak.

'All right, China, maybe you've done this many times before. Go ahead and kill me; I won't cry for help, do what you like with me.'

5

She panted like a timid little mouse cornered by a cat. He couldn't finish the job he had set out to do. Why? He had sent two men packing with a knife before. They had tried to fight, but this creature wasn't resisting at all. Why, why, why? He felt the heat pounding in his temples; the knife dropped, and he sank on to a stool and rested his head on the wall, his hands trembling.

10

After a moment he stood up, looking away from Pinkie. 'I'm sorry, Pinkie, I pray you never in your life to think about this day.'

She looked at him, mystified.

'Say you forgive me.' She nodded twice.

Then she packed up for the day, much earlier than usual.

15

The following day China did not visit Pinkie; nor the next. He could not decide to go there. Things were all in a barbed wire tangle in his mind. But see her he must, he thought. He would just go and hug her; say nothing but just press her to himself because he felt too mean even to tell her not to be afraid of him any more.

Death be not proud – John Donne

Death be not proud, though some have called thee Mighty and dreadful, for thou art not so, For those, whom thou think'st thou dost overthrow, Die not, poor death, nor yet canst thou kill me. From rest and sleep, which but thy pictures be,	5
Much pleasure, then from thee much more must flow, And soonest our best men with thee do go, Rest of their bones, and souls' delivery. Thou art slave to Fate, Chance, kings, and desperate men, And dost with poison, war, and sickness dwell.	10
And poppy or charms can make us sleep as well, And better than thy stroke; why swell'st thou then? One short sleep past, we wake eternally, And death shall be no more; death, thou shalt die.

QUESTION 14

Read the following poem and then answer the set questions.

Cheetah – Charles Eglington

Indolent and kitten-eyed,
This is the bushveld's innocent
The stealthy leopard parodied
With grinning, gangling pup-content.

Slouching through the tawny grass 5
Or loose-limbed lolling in the shade,
Purring for the sun to pass
And build a twilight barricade

Around the vast arena where
In scattered herds, his grazing prey 10
Do not suspect in what wild fear
They'll join with him in fatal play;

Till hunger draws slack sinews tight
And vibrant as a hunter's bow;
Then, like a fleck of mottled light, 15
He slides across the still plateau.

A tremor rakes the herds: they scent
The pungent breeze of his advance;
Heads rear and jerk in vigilant
Compliance with the game of chance 20

In which, of thousands, only one
Is centred in the cheetah's eye;
They wheel and then stampede, for none
Knows which it is that has to die.

His stealth and swiftness fling a noose 25
And as his loping strides begin
To blur with speed, he ropes the loose
Buck on the red horizon in.

The Serf – Roy Campbell

His naked skin clothed in the torrid mist
 That puffs in smoke around the patient hooves,
 The ploughman drives, a slow somnambulist,
 And through the green his crimson furrow grooves.
 His heart, more deeply than he wounds the plain, 5
 Long by the rasping share of insult torn,
 Red clod, to which the war-cry once was rain
 And tribal spears the fatal sheaves of corn,
 Lies fallow now. But as the turf divides
 I see in the slow progress of his strides 10
 Over the toppled clods and falling flowers,
 The timeless, surly patience of the serf
 That moves the nearest to the naked earth
