TEXT AWINNING WITH WASTE

- | | | |
|---|---|--------------|
| 1 | According to the Department of Environmental Affairs, an approximate 19 million tons of municipal waste was generated in South Africa in 2011. This figure must be largely reduced in order to create a healthier environment. South Africa therefore, aims to have all households in large municipalities separating their own waste into recyclable and non-recyclable material by 2016. | 5 |
| 2 | Separating recyclables at household level is a requirement in terms of the Waste Act. In keeping with this law, the South African government's National Waste Management Strategy requires that by 2016 all urban municipalities, cities and towns will have started programmes for waste separation in households. | 10 |
| 3 | A survey on recycling in South Africa was carried out by the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR) in 2010. The survey revealed that only 3,3% of the country's urban population regularly recycled household waste. It also revealed an overall negative attitude towards recycling. Urban households are not recycling because of the lack of space and time. Recycling is seen as dirty work. In addition, many people do not know what is recyclable and what is not. | 15 |
| 4 | A simple solution to motivate South Africans to start recycling in their homes is to use the two-bag system. This involves simply separating dry waste, like paper, from wet waste, like food scraps, and placing them in separate bags. Together with this there must be a regular pavement collection service. CSIR research project leader, Wilma Strydom, said that the two-bag system should be combined with communication and awareness-raising campaigns. | 20

25 |
| 5 | However, many individuals and organisations do show their commitment to saving the planet through recycling programmes. | |
| 6 | In 2012, Knorr – a soup manufacturing company – developed promotional mugs that were to be given out with packets of soup. Unfortunately, some of the handles developed cracks. The company immediately withdrew the mugs so as not to endanger consumers. They were then faced with the challenge of what to do with 100 000 useless mugs. Knorr decided to work with USE-IT, an organisation dedicated to recycling waste from landfill or dump sites. The two companies developed bricks made of soil and the crushed Knorr mugs. More than 100 000 bricks were manufactured and donated to various charities. | 30

7	Another example of an organisation dedicated to recycling is the Wildlands Conservation Trust whose vision is to make a difference by partnering with communities and developing unique ways to strengthen our ecosystems. In 2010, their project began with community members collecting waste in and around their homes and sorting it into different mediums like glass, cans and plastic. The community members are rewarded for their efforts by being given basic necessities and vouchers.	40
8	Wildlands recycled over 4 million kilograms of waste in 2012. Children who are part of this project rush home to do their 'jobs' and as a result are prevented from getting involved in gang-related or negative activities. According to the Wildlands Conservation Trust, the changing attitudes of communities in relation to waste management have been heart-warming to see.	45
9	The responsibility to reduce waste begins in the household with the individual. Chris Whyte, the managing director of USE-IT, said that his family of four used to throw away at least two black bags of waste a week. They have now reduced that to one shopping bag per week. He has introduced a system of separating the waste in his home using different bins. His family's wet waste, like vegetable peels and chicken bones, goes into composting and fermenting bins. Dry waste, like metal, glass, paper and plastic is further separated and put into different bins. These are all easy things that his family does and that every family can and should do to recycle waste.	50 55
10	The ultimate goal is for all South Africans to see more waste collected and recycled than deposited at landfill sites.	60

SECTION B: SUMMARYQUESTION 2

Cellphones have become a part of our everyday lives. Cellphone safety has therefore become important. You have been asked to write a list of SEVEN warnings and tips on cellphone safety for a flyer that will be distributed at your school. Use the following passage to compile your list.

Read the passage (TEXT C) below and write a list of SEVEN main points for inclusion in your list.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. List SEVEN points in full sentences, using not more than 70 words.
2. Your summary must be written in point form.
3. Number your sentences from 1 to 7.
4. Write only ONE point per sentence.
5. Use your OWN words as far as possible.
6. Indicate the total number of words you have used in brackets at the end of your summary.

TEXT CCELLPHONE SAFETY

There are more than 450 million cellphones in Africa today. Experts say that the widespread use of cellphones is contributing to a worldwide revolution in the economy, politics and society. However, nothing is a secret any longer, especially with Internet enabled cellphones, because it is so easy to access information from a mobile device.

In addition, there is the possibility of meeting people online who have evil intentions. The dangerous consequences that come with cellphone usage make it necessary for individual users of mobile devices to exercise care.

You need to be cautious about who you accept when you are on a cellphone chat site. Do not use or send your personal information like your real name, home address or telephone number. In order to protect your privacy, it is wise to use a nickname or initials instead of your full name – you do not want anyone knowing who you are.

When on a social network site like Facebook or Twitter, be careful about what information you give out on your profile. Remember that sometimes the person you become friends with on a social network may not be who they say they are. Not everyone who is friendly is your 'friend'. Do not accept any friend request from people you do not know.

Network providers and organisations, like the Film and Publications Board, are now fully equipped to assist with problems that subscribers may experience, like receiving unwanted or insulting texts.

Cellphones have many benefits but Internet and cellphone safety must come first.
